DISSERTATION

Title: Rethinking Labor Market Inequality in South Korea: Automation, Institutions, and Stratification

Committee: Sakiko Fukuda-Parr (Chair), Will Milberg, Ying Chen

Description: Examines how automation reshapes labor market inequality by reallocating economic risks across stratified employment relations. Using longitudinal panel data (KLIPS) and qualitative interviews, the dissertation demonstrates that institutionalized employment structures mediate technological change and reorganize inequality beyond wage dispersion.

SERVICE AND LEADERSHIP

Labor Union Representative, SENS-UAW, The New School, 2021–2023

Represented academic workers in collective bargaining and institutional negotiations. Organized language tutors, conducted structured interviews and internal investigations, and contributed to securing institutional recognition and compensation for unpaid training and waiting time.

Executive Director (Elected), General Students' Association, Yonsei University, 2009–2010

Served as campaign director for a successful university-wide election and subsequently as Executive Director of the General Students' Association. Directed executive operations, organizational strategy, and campus-wide governance and institutional reform initiatives.

Founder and Chair, Student Association for Transparency in University Fund Operations, 2008–2009

Founded and led a university-wide transparency initiative challenging institutional financial opacity. Coordinated organizational strategy and legal efforts that resulted in a landmark court ruling requiring the disclosure of university fund management records (Seoul Administrative Court, Case No. 2008Guhap26593). Established a legal precedent for financial transparency in private higher education, leading to the public release of previously undisclosed fund operations through the university newspaper

Head Coordinator, Rural Community Outreach Program, Yonsei University, 2007–2008

Led and managed a university-wide outreach program mobilizing over 1,000 student volunteers. Oversaw budget management, logistics, and institutional coordination, and spent extended periods in the field supervising program implementation and organizational operations in underserved rural communities.

President (Elected), College Students' Association, Yonsei University, 2007–2008

Elected to represent the College of Social Science. Led college-level governance, budget oversight, and student policy coordination.

President (Elected), Department Students' Association, 2006–2007

Elected to represent the Department of Public Administration. Organized departmental governance, student representation, and academic coordination.

Volunteer Teacher, Catholic-run Community Study Room, Yeongdeungpo-gu, Seoul, South Korea, 2005–2006

Provided after-school instruction, mentorship, and supervision for children ranging from preschool age to high school seniors in a nun-led urban community education program serving industrial and low-income families. Volunteered regularly (1–2 evenings per week), providing sustained academic support and care in a makeshift study space within an industrial factory building serving youth from surrounding working-class neighborhoods.
